

SPORTING GOODS INDUSTRY DYNAMICS

Volume Two

Summary of Contents

SUMMARY	1
INTRODUCTION	1
CHAPTER THREE—THE PRESENT MARKET SITUATION.....	3
The U.S. tariff issue and the fear of recession	3
The current business situation	4
Latest sports participation trends	9
Updates on some companies covered in Volume One	10
CHAPTER FOUR—OTHER FORMS OF CORPORATE DEVELOPMENT.....	13
Benefits, risks and financing of internal and external diversification	13
Keeping one foot in fashion, the other in sport: Deckers and Wolverine	16
The history and mutation of Wolverine Worldwide	16
The history of Deckers	20
Most snow sports specialists have diversified	23
The history of Head	24
The history of the Rossignol Group	28
The Benetton SportSystem saga	32
The history of Tecnica Group	34
Movement around the golf course	36
The history of Callaway	39

Many other acquisitions have been followed by disinvestments	42
Ownership of casual footwear brands was only temporary for the two majors	43
Declining concentration among the major vendors	43
Private equity fuels growth and business transformation	46
Family-controlled companies want to retain control in different ways	53
Athletes invest in the sporting goods industry	55
Public offerings are taking the back seat for now	58
Asian investors show caution	59
Brand management and licensing groups: BasicNet, ABG, etc.	61
About the Authentic Brands Group	62
The longer history of BasicNet	66
Consistent specialization can pay off	70
The history of Babolat	70
Small can be more	73
CHAPTER FIVE—MANUFACTURING AND SOURCING.....	75
Embracing new manufacturing strategies	75
The development of manufacturing and sourcing	77
The brief history of Odyssey International	81
The evolution of Chinese production	84
Focus on Pou Chen and Yue Yuen	85
De-risking from China	88
India, the new frontier in athletic shoe production	90
The Lewis turning point	92
Persistent in-house manufacturing for skis and other sports equipment	93
Technogym and its history	97
In-house manufacturing for sports shoes: New Balance and others	100
In-house manufacturing for sports clothing	105
The “Italian Sport System”	107

Industrial clusters become creative clusters	109
Reshoring, near-shoring and friend-shoring	110
Sourcing more from Turkey and the Mediterranean Basin	112
Re-shoring and near-shoring for sustainability’s sake	113
New technologies for re-shoring	114
Some contract manufacturers launch their own brands	118
The danger of counterfeits and dupes	120
The development of logistics - A complex supply chain	122
Dealing with high inventories	123
Smart and sophisticated logistics	124
A solid sourcing structure can help companies to outperform	125
The growth and transformation of Macron	125
Control or not control?	128
CHAPTER SIX—VERTICALIZATION TRENDS.....	129
Vertical development strategies – Advantages and limits	129
Decathlon: past, present and future	130
The history of Lululemon Athletica and Chip Wilson	146
Brands invest in their own e-commerce: Gymshark’s model	157
Brands go vertical with their physical mono-brand stores	160
A few cases of coexistence between brands and multi-brand retailers	162
The history and structure of Fenix Outdoor	164
The Luhtanen and Oberrauch families have pursued verticalization in different ways	166
Other forms of verticalization	170
The limits of DTC: go upmarket or omni-channel	171
The advantages of multi-brand retailing for a new brand	173
CHAPTER SEVEN—THE DEVELOPMENT OF SPORTS RETAILING.....	175
The origins of specialty multi-brand sports retailing	175
Different ways of looking for scale at home and abroad	180

Growing concentration in sports retailing	182
Survival of the fittest in U.S. sports retail	185
The saga of Herman's, TSA and Gart	185
The ascent of Dick's	188
About Academy Sports + Outdoors	192
The history of REI	194
Foot Locker and a few other retailers have been breaking national borders	196
The history of Foot Locker	196
European retailers have moved abroad more frequently	202
XXL Sport's fast ride	204
Sports Direct and JD expanded beyond a turbulent British market	205
The development of JD Sports Fashion	207
A special animal: Mike Ashley's Frasers Group and Sports Direct	213
Other retailers have joined a buying group	220
Intersport International	222
Sport 2000 International	226
Rallye's short run in a difficult French market	229
The saga of The Athlete's Foot	231
Some pure buying groups in the U.S. and Europe	233
A special market situation in the U.K., Spain and Italy	235
The history of Cisalfa Sport	237
Non-specialty retailers: Mass merchants	238
Department stores and other sales channels	240
The development of e-commerce in the sporting goods sector	241
Survival of the fittest in online retailing	244
The history of Signa Sports United	244
Maximizing retail sales and the future of retailing	246
The challenge of re-commerce	249

CHAPTER EIGHT—WHOLESALE DISTRIBUTION

AND INTERNATIONAL EXPANSION..... 256

The development of international distribution in Europe and North America 256

Emerging markets – the new frontier 261

Many distributors and licensees double up as retailers 263

The transformation of Poland’s Martes Sport 264

The story of Sportland in the Baltics 265

Russia: a difficult market 267

Red Fox and the other activities of Third Pole 271

The history of Russia’s biggest retailer, Sportmaster 273

The big and challenging Chinese market 275

Major opportunities in the complex Indian market 285

Intertwined interests in Southeast Asia and the Middle East 289

MAP Active, a major player in Southeast Asia 290

Looking further to the East: Japan, Australia, et al. 293

Two mature markets: Japan and South Korea 294

An interesting market: Brazil 297

Mexico 300

Other Latin American countries 300

Australia and New Zealand 301

About the Australian Super Retail Group 301

Building up an international mindset inside the company 304

M&A as a foreign expansion vehicle 305

CHAPTER NINE—PRODUCT, MARKETING, SUSTAINABILITY..... 307

Product development and consumer engagement 307

Less can be more in product development 308

The importance of creativity in product development 309

The importance of branding 313

A clearly defined, moving consumer target	317
Investing in women’s sports	321
Investing in women’s sports sponsorships	325
Ingredient brands for product development and advertising	327
Other types of co-branding and collaboration	331
Price positioning and comparisons with the luxury goods industry	334
The history and strategy of Moncler	340
Alternative marketing and merchandising strategies	343
Customer engagement and retention	349
About premium price positioning	351
Sustainability and ESG: A necessity or a plus?	351
CHAPTER TEN—LEADERSHIP AND CONCLUSIONS	362
Internal organization and leadership	362
A few words about artificial intelligence	366
Concluding remarks	367
A few words of gratitude	368
INDEX	370